Member of the House Defends Governor James' Administration Legislative Program

PARTY DIVISION CAUSE

Republicans Lacked Constitutional Majority in The Upper Chamber

By International News Service

HARRISBURG, June 5—A staunch defense of the James Administration's legislative program was made today by speaker of the House Ellwood J. Turner, R., Delaware, as he placed the blame for legislative failures on the "blind, partisan and obstructive tactics of the democratic minority in the Senate."

Turner's defense of the 1939 session came in bitter reply to caustic criticisms of the Legislature's activities that have echoed from every corner of the state since adjournment on Memorial Day.

The Senate Democrats, Turner charged, were "aided and abetted at times by selfish interests that brought pressure to bear upon Senators who forgot party for personal viewpoint." He did not name any particular senator or senators.

"It is my belief," he asserted, "that a calm and considered appraisal of

P. O. S. of A. To Dedicate Flag Pole at Valley Forge

The Historical Committee of the Patriotic Order Sons of America are in charge of the P. O. S. of A. Day program at Valley Forge, Saturday afternoon, June 17th.

A fifty-foot flag pole is being erected in front of the P. O. S. of A. Building, which will be dedicated at 2:15 p. m., and the first flag raised. Following, the parade will march to Washington's Headquarters, where with the Chairman of the Committee, Lewis A. Gaul of Reading presiding, Judge John Robert Jones of Philadelphia will be the main speaker. State President Elmer F. Keller of Emmaus, Pa., and State President Helen Stump of Reading will also participate.

Members and patriotic friends are invited to participate.

The interest of the P. O. S. of A. in Valley Forge dates back to 1886 when the Order became interested in saving Washington's Headquarters, which the P. O. S. of A. owned until the State condemned it for park purposes. A fund of $15,000 was in hand which the state also secured and the income on this amount has kept the headquarters in repairs even to this date.

Proper recognition has been given the Order upon a marker inside the Headquarters, denoting that the building was saved through the generous spirit of the Patriotic Order Sons of America. It is the purpose of the Order to hold an annual celebration at Valley Forge commencing with the initial meeting June 17th.

DOYLESTOWN, June 5—Cautioning against the present day tendencies toward governmental control of charity and social welfare, William S. ## Blame Open Torpedo Tube

By Charles A. Smith

Birkenhead, England, June 5—An open torpedo tube and death of three men, apparently from heart failure, in the Davis escape chamber, blocking the way to further rescues, jointly carried the appalling loss to 98 or 99 lives aboard the British submarine "Thetis," in Liverpool Bay, it was disclosed today.

In the first full explanation of the worst overseas disaster in history, R. S. Johnson, managing director of Campbell-Laird, Ltd., builders of the "Thetis," made known initial results of the investigation by squads of divers who have probed the depths of the bay since the submarine went down on its last test dive.

"Divers found water inside No. 5 forward torpedo tube," Johnson said. "The forward door was not closed either through damage or some other cause."

"The crew opened the after-door, thinking that there was no water in the tube, but water rushed out and overpowered them, forcing them to skip out, and try to shut the door."

"But water again overpowered them, and they were able to shut the door only partially. Then they had to skip out of that compartment into the next one to make certain of closing this bulkhead."

"The two forward compartments were full of water, but no one drowned on that occasion."

This explanation presumably accounted for the fact that the Thetis went down nose first, her prow embedding itself in mud on the bottom, while her air-filled stern headed skyward, protruding 18 feet above the surface at low tide, and rising high but temporary hope they might be saved by means of a hole cut through the Thetis' stern by oxy-acetylene torches.

REV. G. E. BOSWELL IS BACCALAUREATE SPEAKER AT B. H. S.

Rector of St. James' Episcopal Church Conducts Service In H. S. Auditorium

WAS WELL ATTENDED

Bases Sermon on Part of 27th Verse of 30th Chapter of Genesis

"The wants of mankind in every age can be summarized in three words, namely health, wealth and happiness," the Rev. George E. Boswell, rector of St. James Episcopal Church, told the members of the Bristol high school graduating class yesterday afternoon.

Rev. Boswell was the speaker at the baccalaureate service held in the high school auditorium. The service was well attended.

The sermon of Rev. Boswell was based on part of the 27th verse of the 30th Chapter of Genesis. The sermon follows:

"I have learned by experience that the Lord hath blessed me."

"Ever since creation the most fascinating study that everyone everywhere could possibly make, is honest reflection about human life. Long ago the Psalmist cried out, 'we are fearfully and wonderfully made' or again 'What is Man, that thou art mindful of him?' or 'Thou hast made him a little lower than the Angels, to crown him with glory and worship.' The truth of the Psalmist's words soon becomes obvious when we seriously consider our latent possibilities.

"Human beings are not all alike; one of the glories of life is we are all different. We do not have the same ability to devise, create or administer; we do not have the same brain power or the same heart power. When, however, we think of man's desires, we find a striking similarity. The wants of mankind in every age can be summarized in three words, namely health, wealth and happiness.

"Everyone, of course wants health, for all the other treasures of life, those blessings that are over and above our essential needs, become of little value unless we have the prime blessing of healthy bodies, and healthy minds and healthy souls as well. Health is a matter that is largely in our own hands. It is true there are some who inherit weakened bodies from their parents or ancestors, and they are to be pitied for they are made to suffer many things through no fault of their own; there are times too when even the best physical bodies cannot avoid the ravages of certain diseases, but generally speaking, if we observe the general laws of health, and take the proper care of our bodies, we can have good and robust health. Much of our sicknesses and frail bodies and broken down nervous systems are the result of the continued abuse of our bodies, in order to get certain so called thrills, and in order to be what 'dame fashion' decrees strictly modern or up to date.

NO "INCIDENT" IN THIS

Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy has indulged his distinctively individual flair for diplomacy by jibing at British tailors for placing trouser waistlines too high, and at English haberdashers for selling shirts with too long tails and socks which "come up to the knees." The trade journal of British tailors and cutters has reciprocated by characterizing Mr. Kennedy's remarks as "another little bit of blarney" and "just a pleasant exaggeration" and by suggesting that Mr. Kennedy might be more comfortable if he wore English shirts which are long enough to keep one "warm about the middle."

Honors seem even in this exchange of international pleasantries. Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador to Washington, probably will not deem it necessary to contribute his opinion of American-made trousers, skirts and socks—although, in view of Sir Ronald's formidable stature, he ought to be a most effective spokesman for the long-shirt and long-sock school of thought. British and American tailors, shirt-makers and sock-makers alike, however, probably would rule the giant envoy out of bounds.

But Mr. Kennedy is a man of average dimensions—physically. It is pleasant to find that there still is at least one European country where an American business man, turned diplomat, can publicly exercise his sense of humor without provoking an international incident. Still Mr. Kennedy might have been diplomatic enough to realize that an Englishman's shirt-tail is his own affair.

BEES AND AUTOS

"He died" of injuries suffered when his auto crashed into a tree while he was trying to brush a bee from the car."

The above, from the news columns, tells a story of what, with more or less tragedy, often happens this season of the year when bees are honey gathering.

It is well to remember these few rules if a bee, or any allied stinging insect, enters your car as you are driving:

First, the sting of a bee is not fatal. It doesn't hurt much more than a bite from a mosquito, though the subsequent pain and swelling are somewhat greater. Prompt application of ammonia, bicarbonate or baking soda or even wet mud—anything that is a strong alkali—will, to a great degree, counteract the effect of the acid injected by the bee's sting.

Second, don't get panicky. The bee in your car is just as frightened as you are and more anxious to get out than you are to oust it. The bee buzzes frantically on the windshield. Swatting at it with your hand or handkerchief only frightens it the more. Then in its darts about it may strike your face and sting.

This needless fear of a simple stinging or the swatting which diverts your attention from managing the car may cause a fatal crash.

Third, if a bee gets in your car, steer over to the side of the road. Open both doors. The cross draft of air will carry the bee out or its natural instinct to seek freedom will cause it to fly out. If you feel afraid, after you have opened the doors, get out yourself. The bee will probably fly out before you.

Then you may continue your journey in safety.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Nov. 8, 1877. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The following items were culled from the issue of The Bucks County Gazette of November 8, 1877:

William Tomlinson, the Newtown stage driver, does not often visit Bristol, but one day this week, having an errand here he brought down the mails from Newtown, and bringing up at the old postoffice in grand style threw off the mails and was about driving off when some one inquired what was the matter, when he imagined that he had heard of the location of the office being changed so he made some plausible excuse for his action and gathering up the pouches drove around to the Cottage Hotel and quietly inquired "Where that post office was anyhow, for he would be darned if he could find it." Being shown where the office was, he conveyed the pouches there in safety, and kept a discreet silence about his misadventure until he got away from Bristol. It was too good a joke for the regular mail carrier—so he let the cat out of the bag.

Miss Mehlham, who has been so seriously ill during the past week is recovering slowly, but Miss Stearns who was taken sick a few days before Miss Merriam, died on Saturday and was taken home to Woburn, Mass., on Monday morning for burial. A funeral service was held in the Presbyterian Church previous to the removal of the body and was attended by a large number of the acquaintances of the deceased teacher. Her case is a sad one, she left home to come here to teach, this being her first engagement, and had scarcely been teaching a month when she was taken ill and died so suddenly.

Monday night the cigar factory of Charles Gaskill, on Walnut street, nearly opposite the new chapel, was entered, and about 1,600 cigars which were boxed up, with the revenue stamps upon them ready for shipment the next morning, were stolen. The boxes were broken open, and the pieces strewn all along the alley leading from Walnut to Mulberry street. Mr. Gaskill estimates his loss at about $50. It is rather discouraging to work as industriously as Mr. Gaskill does, and receive no benefit from the result of the labor.

Henry S. Booz, and William M. Stackhouse, of Bristol Township, left Bristol on Monday evening last for West Virginia, via Pa. Central R. R. to Huntington, thence by Broad Top R. R. to Cumberland, where they join regular trappers to the mountains of West Virginia, on a ten days regular cruise. Deer and turkeys are said to be the game.

The largest specimen of corn we have seen this season, is an ear of corn received from Thomas W. Slack, Buckingham, measuring 16½ inches long.

Rosa D'Erina, "Erin's prima donna," who sang at St. Mark's Church recently, is now sojourning at the Closson House.

A gas light in front of the post office is an improvement which will be appreciated dark nights.

About $1,000 was cleared by the fair at St. James' chapel.

HULMEVILLE—Owing to the storm of Friday last, the lecture announced to be given before the Young Men's Christian Association by Rev. W. H. Conard, of Bristol, was postponed, and instead addresses on the license question were made by Messrs. Estell, Tharp, Griffith, Whelan, Knight, Townsend, and the president, E. G. Harrison.

The Great Game of Politics

pressure enough on him to force Mr. Farley to fall in line.

IN this they have failed so far. Mr.

Farley may be for a third term in the end, but it certainly will not be as part of the present "draft" movement as engineered by the Corcoran group. That is now accepted as fact and it is no reflection upon Mr. Farley's loyalty to the President to say so. Mr. Farley is silent upon the subject and probably will remain silent. No one is authorized to speak for him. Nevertheless there is ground for believing that he is not a third-term advocate and would not be if he were utterly devoid of either Presidential or Vice-Presidential aspirations himself.

THE practical political reason, of course, is that he knows a third nomination cannot be secured by means of a "draft," that it would have to be jammed through a reluctant convention and that it would split the Democratic party hopelessly. Those who know Mr. Farley best are convinced that he is proceeding in accord with what he believes Mr. Roosevelt's desire. He has, they say, been told by the President many times that he wants and intends to retire at the end of his term. He has accepted that as true and nothing Mr. Roosevelt has said recently has caused him to doubt it.

HE will join no phony movement to "draft" the President. He is not going to "co-operate" in any camouflaged attempt to make it seem that Mr. Roosevelt is being "forced" to run again. For one thing, he thinks that if that sort of effort were successful in the convention, it would be fatal in the election. The only person who can enlist him for a third-term effort is Mr. Roosevelt himself and to do that Mr. Roosevelt must personally tell him that he wants the nomination and intends to go after it.

IF that happens, Mr. Farley will tell the President he thinks it is judgment but is with him anyhow. At least this is his position as outlined by his friends and as suggested in print by certain writers who have known him for many years. The young gentlemen behind the "draft drive" also are convinced that Mr. Farley feels this way and they resent it very much. Such an attitude, they think—and rightly—makes the "draft" idea impossible to sustain no matter how great a reception Mr. Roosevelt gets on his Western trip or how many inspired resolutions are passed. If Mr. Farley will not connive in the renomination unless Mr. Roosevelt flatly tells him he wants him to do so, then the "draft" idea becomes ridiculous. Instead of a draft it becomes a demand.

IN the light of these things, the discouragement of the "drafters" is not surprising. It is true they have made the third term a general topic of conversation and they have made many people believe Mr. Roosevelt really wants one. But they have not got a favorable response from any, save the most subservient New Deal Senators and the more blatant of the labor leaders. The fact that Mr. Earl Browder, head of the Communist party, has declared himself in favor of the "draft" is not one upon which they like to dwell. The best detached judgment is that while, for obvious reasons, Mr. Roosevelt will not definitely slam the door on the third-term idea, he will not tell Mr. Farley he wants it, which means that, for even more obvious reasons, he has no intention of seeking the 1940 nomination. It is the synthetic nature of this "draft" movement that is causing it to sag rather than the Farley attitude, though it must be admitted that that has not greatly benefited its health.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

EDITOR'S NOTE: During Harrison Carroll's vacation, his column is being written by various Hollywood well-knowns. Today it is Marion Brooks Ritchie, who is head of the Paramount fan mail department and who has a good deal to say about whether the letter you write to a star on this lot will ever reach the star personally.

By MARION BROOKS RITCHIE
Copyright, 1939
King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD.—Unaccustomed as I am to breaking into print this way, I am fairly bursting with things to tell you. Who wouldn't be—after 13 years in a job like mine?

A studio fan mail secretary is a sort of shock absorber between the stars and the public. Naturally, I've been shocked plenty in my career, but time and familiarity have made the job any less interesting. First to acquaint you with the routine:

Most fan mail is delivered through the studio. At Paramount, it is assorted by my assistant and myself—and then turned over to the stars. Post-office fashion.

The stars are required to return the mail to us, together with the fan letters they have received personally at their homes. And once or twice a month I go over a batch with each star. Some letters the star will answer personally; the others I attend to, according to the star's instructions.

Don't Ask for Money!
Begging letters are not answered, except in rare cases.

Some are turned over to charitable organizations for investigation. You'd be surprised—or maybe you wouldn't—at the number of shishers we hear from in fan mail. Some have "business propositions" to offer, but needless to say the stars are just not interested.

Then there are the crank letters—lots of 'em. Some are just nasty, some attempt to extort money with threats of bodily harm, others are from screwballs who fancy themselves desperately in love with some of our talent. At present, for instance, three different men have been seen trying to bully Madeleine Carroll—by mail, mind you—into eloping with them. The crust!

If a threatening letter indicates the author is dangerous, we turn it over to the police. But we seldom get letters that worry us that much. I don't believe we've called in the authorities on more than three letters in the past year.

You see, we figure this way: barking dogs seldom bite. A real baddie doesn't send threatening letters; he just acts. Most cranks, we have found, are harmless people, motivated either by the desire for publicity or by mental quirks that will not carry them past the blustering stage.

Publicity Seekers

By taking notice of the publicity seekers, we would only encourage them. (Witness the fact that many who ignore write in later and offer to surrender.) And our system, I believe, has proved itself. In all my time at Paramount, I have never caused the arrest of a crank letter writer, but neither have I ever had occasion to regret this record.

Sometimes we will warn a crank, as we recently did a man who had been writing Irene Dunne.

His letters, vaguely threatening—obviously the work of a feeble mind—started from New York. They began coming from Chicago, then from Kansas City. The man announced he was working his way to Hollywood.

Miss Dunne, who was working in "Invitation to Happiness," became genuinely upset. So I wrote to the man and warned him to cease his annoyances or the police would be notified. The letters promptly stopped.

Real "Pen Pals"

Which brings me to a different type of fan correspondent. I mean the straight, sincere type, completely upright as to motives. Some of these have become real "pen pals" of the stars. Claudette Colbert, for instance, has been corresponding with Miss Catherine Fries, of Portland, Ore., for eight years; with Mrs. Betty Stephenson, of Minneapolis, for seven, and with Miss Eleanor McCallie—whose address escapes me—for five. She recently sent Mrs. Stephenson's young son a birthday present.

Just now there is a growing vogue among the fans for collecting star-souvenirs. They're collecting everything from articles of the stars' clothing to—yes—the parings of their fingernails. They ask for paper cups, hairpins, salt and pepper shakers, perfume bottles and even shoe strings used by the stars.

Summer Frocks Are Smart, Cool and Washable

Smart and cool, and, above all, washable. Summer clothes will feature all these things this year. We show you three that may be particularly useful to you during the coming season. The daytime dress features Val lace frilling and perky puffed shoulders. The frock is made of Gale crepe which packs with a minimum of crushing and launders as easy as a hankie. The dinner dress is made of sanforized shrunk cotton with cap sleeves and perky bows at either side of the bodice-top. The print is an authentic old hand-blocked design found among heirlooms handed down in a Swiss family of designers. The strapless evening gown is made from an old-fashioned cotton print in distinct geometric design. The enormous skirt billows out whether or not you use a hoopie.

Timely because the film deals with the American Way, demonstrating that from rags to riches is still possible in one country, that right does not depend upon might.

"Streets of New York" is the story of Jimmy Keenan, who believed in honesty. Jimmy supports himself and a little crippled boy by running a newsstand, goes to night school to study law, and is known as "The Abe Lincoln of 19th Avenue."

1918, "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," which opened at the Grand Theatre yesterday, stars Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in their most distinguished vehicle to date.

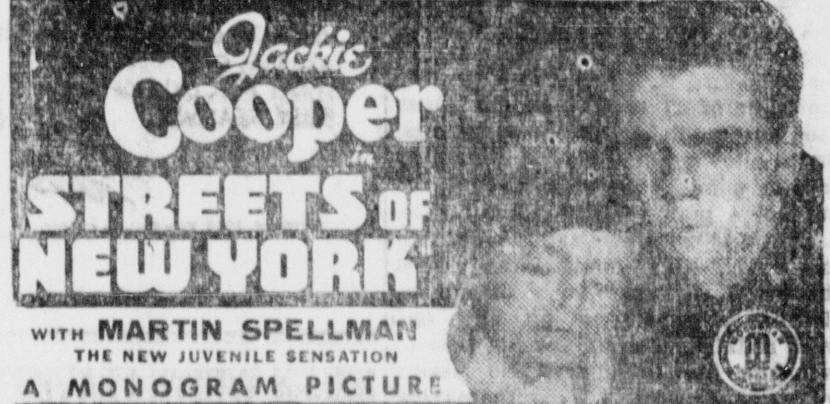

As its title indicates, the film deals with the dazzling career of the noted pre-War dancing couple; and it was a happy thought to team the wing-footed Fred and Ginger in the respective roles of the Castles, for they are perfectly cast as that famous duo, and their interpretation of the Castle routines are delightful to behold.
